THE ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY AWAKENS TO THE POWER OF THE DISABILITY COMMUNITY

Whether we are talking about large or small screen, people with disabilities are helping Hollywood in a big way. Are there challenges? Yes. But, the entertainment industry is finally taking notice.

For the very first time, the 2019 Disability Matters Conference & Awards Gala will present a session on Disability in the Media and Entertainment Industry. This highly engaging session will be lead by Bryan Roberts, the associate dean in the Roy H. Park School of Communications at Ithaca College. In this position, he oversees a wide array of student success-initiatives including assisting with the creation and launch of the Ithaca College New York City Program. Diagnosed with Parkinson’s disease in 2010 at age 30, he serves on the Patient Council of the Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson’s Research.
